

FASHION WEEK CITY GUIDE: PARIS

Last but not least, the City of Lights. The fourth and final city of fashion month is the home of couture, filled with romance and laced with a certain je ne sais quoi. There are hundreds of worthy eateries and spots to hang out, but we've taken out the hard work of the search and rounded up a few of the finest for you. Enjoy.

For brunch

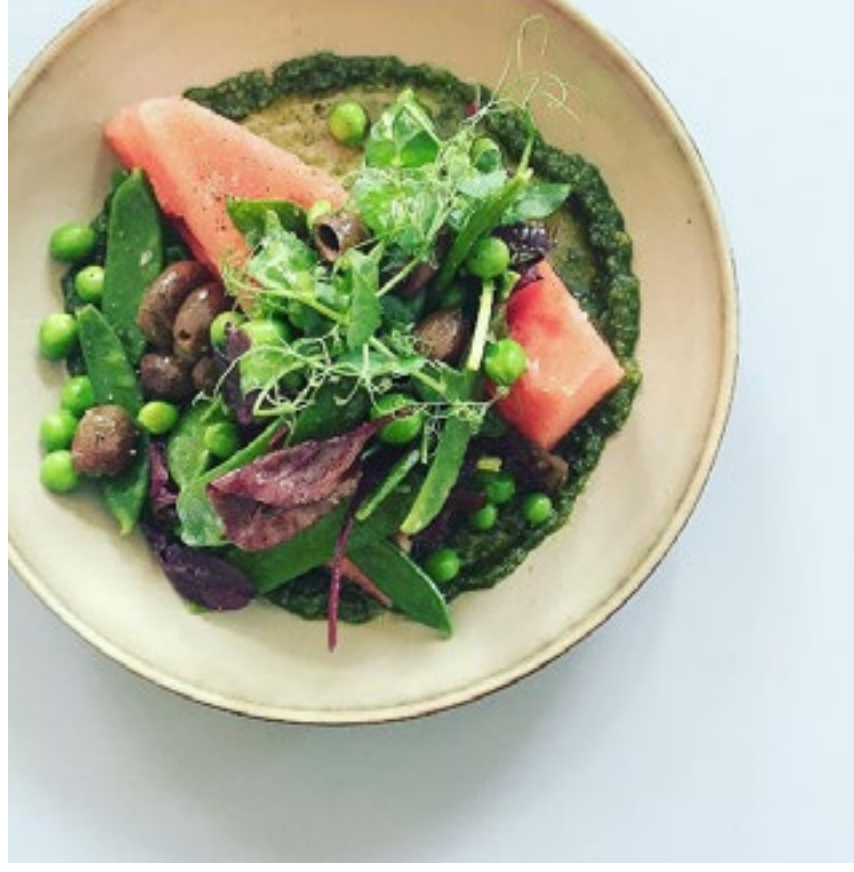

Soya

Paris eateries are notoriously tricky for vegetarians to navigate, but with an all-you-can-eat vegan brunch, Soya is at hand to maintain energy levels.

For a culture fix

Olafur Eliasson at Versailles

It's your last chance to catch Versailles' guest artist Olafur Eliasson's striking installations before the exhibition ends on 20th October. Plan on sticking in the city? Head to the Gagosian Gallery's Paris outpost for a show Duane Hanson's realist human sculptures.

Rambert Rigaud Fleuriste en Herbe

Who doesn't love fresh flowers? Whether it's for a big installation, a homesick assistant's birthday or just because, Isabel Marant's favourite florist will have just the thing. Ex-studio director at Yves Saint Laurent and Dior, Rigaud stocks exquisite orchids.

2 Rue de l'Université, 75007 Paris, France

For forty winks

L'Hotel

The final home of Oscar Wilde (demands for him to pay his hotel bill are framed on the walls) and 10 minutes' walk from the Louvre, this boutique hotel on the Left Bank has an underground pool and a Michelin-starred restaurant. Be sure to book a table two or three weeks ahead, it's that good.

For dancing

Silencio

Named after the creepy theatre in Mulholland Drive, David Lynch's Paris nightclub is six flights of stairs down, and has a reflective dance floor, cinema, library, and a dream forest of yellow steel trees. Fun fact: the gold leaf is applied by the same guys who touch up Napoleon's tomb.

Debaube et Gallais

Napoleon's official chocolatier is still going strong and their marrons glacés and candied chestnuts are a favourite of designer Giambattista Valli. Take home as a treat for family and friends who held the fort while you were away.

33 Rue Vivienne, 75002 Paris.

Rasa Yoga

In the shadows of Notre Dame, this white-walled peaceful haven with bilingual teachers is a favourite with off-duty models. Squeeze in a vinyasa class between appointments and you'll feel all the better for it.
